“ When I think about "uncle" Eddie, my mind goes back to when I was about 10 or 11, Ed was in High School, and I thought he was so handsome. He was a football player, he had a flat top haircut that he let me and my sister run our hands over (it felt so good), he sang and played the guitar, and he smelled a little bit of cigarettes (which was very intriguing to me). He would let us pretend to drive his car while he was really steering it. He had the best Donald Duck impression you ever heard. At the time I really didn't understand how special it was for him to give us such attention, but as an adult I realized, him being a teenager in high school, he never once made my sister or me feel like it was a nuisance to two have two little girls following him around begging for his attention. I loved my maw maw, and she treated her baby, Ed, like a king I thought. She always fixed breakfast for him, and I remember she would give him those oatmeal pies as a treat. I also was struck with how Jeannie and Loretta, his two sisters, babied him and fussed over him. In my eyes he deserved to have that special care. When we learned he was marrying Suzanne, I thought it was so perfect, because she was the most beautiful woman, marrying the most handsome man. He was kind. He was gentle. He was funny. He was special, and he will always be special in my heart. I will always cherish my West Virginia Memories growing up with my two special Aunts, and Uncle Ed. And, as I grow older, I realize what a treasure that time in my life was. Today, my heart hurts. It hurts because Ed is not physically here now, but my heart hurts more for the people who will feel his absence the most, Suzanne and their children and grandchildren, and Loretta. I'm sending prayers up for comfort in whatever form the Lord sees fit to minister to them in this hard time. May God Bless You and Keep You. Thanks for being such a special Uncle, Ed. Till we meet again in Heaven. Verna Wyatt

“ Our family was truly blessed by PaPaw Ed when our son went to Suzanne's. Liam would always look to see if Ed was at McDonald's too and we sometimes had to go in just to see Ed. A fine man and we will miss seeing him.
